A noble gesture

Giving your body to science is a worthy choice. It is an act of generosity towards the future. Thanks to those who choose to give, advances are made in research, training is improved and treatments become safer.

Why is it important?

To train healthcare professionals

Studying anatomy in detail on the human body is fundamental in the training of doctors, nurses and researchers.

For the health and safety of patients

Whole body donation allows healthcare workers to hone their abilities, reducing the margin of error and increasing the safety of medical procedures.

For progress in medical research

Each donation is a step forward for health care. It is an opportunity to improve the lives of many people.

Your body can continue to teach, inspire and save lives.

How do I express my consent?

Download the declaration of consent to the donation of your post mortem body and tissues (DPM) from www.dapartemia.it. Fill out the form, and remember to name a person you trust (fiduciary). This person will have the duty of informing the doctor who certifies your death of your will to donate.

Take the form to your local municipal office to authenticate your signature on the form.

Bring the signed form to your local health authority (ASL), who will straight away transmit the information contained in it to the national database.

Then what happens?

Your fiduciary will inform the doctor who certifies your death of your will to donate. The doctor will then contact the nearest referral center. Once the existence of a registered consent form has been verified, your body will be transported from the location of your death to the referral centre.

The centre will take charge of your body for 12 months, during this time all scheduled procedures allowed by Law 10/2020 will be carried out with maximum respect for your personal dignity and anonymity. At the end of this period, your body will be returned to your family.

The referral centre will cover the costs for transportation and burial or cremation, according to your wishes.
